

Mobile View In Landscape

Primordial Source ~ Lithia Spring Water

Deep within the Stone Mountain GA granite pluton is the primordial spring source of Lithia Spring Water. The Stone Mountain, GA geological pluton formation was formed at the time of the Blue Ridge Mountain around 300-350 million years ago. At the site of Lithia Springs, beneath the earth's surface, primordial water journeys upward to the earth's surface through a mountain of quartz monzonite. During the water's long journey, through miles of fissures within the granite, telluric currents formed by geomagnetic micro-pulsations energize the water. As the primordial water rises to the surface it leaches minerals from the quartz monzonite granite enriching it with monoatomic/polyatomic minerals and trace elements that include Lithium, Gold, Silver and other rare earth elements that are beneficial to human health. When the water finally reaches the earth's surface it has been potentized and energized with alkaline ionic micro-nutrients and earth energy. Primordial mineral spring water is extremely rare and can be identified by the fact that primordial water contains virtually no nitrates. Nitrates are an organic mineral compound marker that denotes water exposed to the earth's surface through the natural water cycle. Lithia Spring Water contains no nitrates, therefore its water does not originate from the outside world's toxic watershed, but from a primordial pristine source deep within the earth's crust. Hydrological researchers theorize that the primordial Pangaea sea water is encapsulated within the earth's crust. Lithia Spring Water naturally contains trace amounts of Lithium (Li³), a primordial element (or, more properly, produced in Big Bang nucleosynthesis).

Sacred Spring Guardian 1887 Spring House

The sacred spring is housed inside a vintage spring house that protects its pristine primordial water from the outside toxic world. Amazingly this vintage spring house was built in 1887 with technology and design that protects its pristine primordial water from UV light, groundwater, animals, insects and any organic material that can contaminate its purity and potency. Inside the spring house, there is an ancient wonder to behold. As the primordial water ends its long journey through miles of fissures deep within the Stone Mountain GA granite pluton it flows into a large medicine bowl hewed out of solid granite rock. This ancient medicine bowl is at the bottom a giant 25-foot deep basin that is hewed from solid granite rock. When the pristine primordial Lithia Water flows into the medicine bowl it fills the basin with crystal clear effervescent water that appears to be vibrant and alive. This rare health-enhancing water never sees the light of day until it is poured into a glass from our innovative 5-Liter Eco-Friendly spout dispenser. No UV light exposure to Lithia Spring Water assures that micronutrient monatomic and polyatomic minerals /trace elements retain their natural energized potency.

Sacred Native American Healing Spring

Since ancient times people have made pilgrimages to Lithia Springs to drink its healing water. At the site of this Sacred Native American Healing Spring are the ruins of a prehistoric period stone temple that has survived both time and urban development. What remains of a great temple complex are ancient ruins that give evidence to the significance of the healing powers of Lithia Spring Water. The builders of this forgotten ancient wonder of the world are unknown and their great civilization has been buried in the sands of time. The archaeological artifact evidence we have discovered at the spring site are those of the ancient American Mound Builders (possibly Adena Culture) who flourished in Georgia thousands of years ago. These ancient stone temple builders left behind their wisdom and knowledge on the surface of the giant animals (effigies) carved from granite boulders who stand guard over the springs. Perhaps, this megalithic temple was built as a timeless beacon to call out, through the sands of time, to future generations of health seekers seeking Mother Earth's healing powers. Historic Fact: Lithia Springs GA, the city, was founded by the popular health benefits of Lithia Spring Water in 1882.

"We are a people who are neither happy nor healthy because we have forgotten the healing powers of mother earth"

Mourning Dove (Humanism) Native Indian Writer 1884-1936

CONGRESS OF PHYSICIANS

1887 Congress of Physicians Lithia Springs 1887

In October 1887, the Congress of Physicians held their annual conference at the site of Lithia Springs, Georgia. Historical records show that prestigious doctors of the day prescribed Lithia Spring Water as a general health tonic. It is a historic fact that many doctors of the period used natural remedies to address health issues.

World Health Organization

Lithium is Considered a Mineral Nutrient